

Performance Review Guidelines

The performance review cycle runs twice per year and includes self-review, manager review, calibration, and a final review.

Employees should document achievements, goals, and development plans before the review meeting.

Promotion decisions are based on performance evidence, role scope, and business need.